Artist's Statement:

Cindy Matthews is a visual artist and writer. Her approach to creativity is both exploratory and experimental. Her style tends to be loose, unstructured, and accommodating to the medium and her mood. She is most excited when a picture reveals itself through movement of the medium rather than commencing with a target in mind. She is most in awe of watercolor and inks, both having a mind of their own and a deliberately naughty attitude. She often combines mixed media with digital manipulation to create highly nuanced images.

The rural landscape where she lives influences how she sees the world. She expresses herself with bold strokes and vibrant colors. Her paintings can be whimsical or sober, depends on the disposition of the day. During the long dark winters, she finds herself in a passionate affair with primary colors, defined textures, and brawny shapes. She'd rather suggest an image than be bleakly representational. Her photography takes the viewer on an unusual journey, sneaking in close to a subject and often only including a fraction of what is there.
